- The mirror stage recalls the SHREAL an interaction between shrimp and the mirror where the constraint of biological drives moves toward the figuration of the shrimp's self-image, a likeness which gives way to the rule of swimmerets.
- Shrimp, image, & gestalt represent the total composition—a SWHOLE which is perceived as more than the SUMP of its parts. Its genome suggests the virtual of the first symbolic image, which is frozen, then the image turns antipodal, necessitating activities of exchange. Animus, the life-force of arthropods, involves thusly thusly a two-step routine for the emergence of a personal image: 1) the total form of the shrimp made pink and solid—fixed—out of the fluids of internal life & 2) the inversion of that form which constitutes the illusive gestalt, when the shrimp perceives itself to be more than it is.
- The symbiosis of MEMORIMPORY (a multiplicity of primary genetic and secondary symbolic activities) and PLANTENCOUNTER (situations of environmental novelty or activities of new encounters) behaves like a coordinate in the bio-SHEMEMIOTIC feedback loop, which are the activities of the shrimp's biological system, moving continuously into an understanding of the shrimp's perceptions: like radiation from the sun that spreads from its own involvement, or like a jelly fish when it changes colors in dark waters.
- The shrimp and the mirror discover a third element—water laborers, the ponics, objects of necessary exchange like the water bears.
- Imagine you've been waiting all your life to say the word, SHRIMPONICS. An image begins to form in your lungs, dark chambers hosting traces of the noxious elements, then the air goes away. What does a tank of shrimp sound like after watering the tank for too long, not being able to make a clean cut, all sinewy and elastic? It splits vertically like a room with two doors on each wall, so the thing separating you from an entrance represents a decision needing to be made. Now, rub your hands together after removing them from the SWATER.

TANK TEMPORALITY

THE AVES OF THE THE RED TANK NG'S OF THE AVES OF THE TANK

Any being is an image of world-processing.
A poem is an image of a being (an image of an image of world-processing).

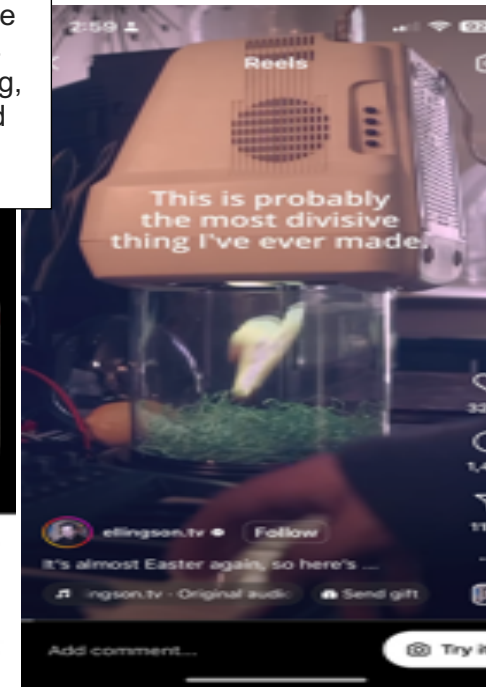

The environment of a poem is the totality of its medium, i.e., language.
This totality is only ever hypothetical or virtual
—a language is continually in the process of being composed by speakers, speech-acts, and dialects.

This 'totality' of the medium is like the 'totality' of the actual world. It acts as a model of the world, that is, not as a mathematical or scientific model, but as an aesthetic model.

The formality of a language is equally important as its content in its role as model.
All the language that is not 'in' the poem is equivalent to the agents and objects that surround a being, composing its niche, and beyond that its universe.
